YOUR PROBLEMS

by Ann Landers

"My Husband Is A Window Peeper"

Dear Ann Landers: My husband is a window peeper. Oh, he doesn't stand outside strange houses and look—he's much too sophisticated for that. He has the finest binoculars on the market and can operate very nicely from a pitch-black patio or from our bedroom window.

For months I considered this my own secret shame (thinking, of course, there was something terribly wrong with him) when recently at a dinner party the subject came up. I learned to my horror that almost every man present was engaging in the same sport. The peepers gleefully compared notes on the best type of binoculars and the most effective vantage points. Then the conversation fanned out to include the fascinating things that had been seen.

This letter is not a request for advice. Nothing I could say or do would get him to stop anyway. I'm writing in the hope that you will print this letter, along with my pleas to all female readers, to keep your shades down, girls. And I MEAN ALL the way down.—LMA GUNIT

Dear Ima: The fact that the sport is popular doesn't make it decent. Psychologists tell us that men who go in for peek-a-boo magazines and the spy-glass routine are insecure and/or immature. Often they are incapable of anything beyond looking.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband is a salesman and makes good money, but it seems to disappear into thin air.

We have seven children. He gives me $20 a week for groceries. When I tell him I just can't manage on what he gives me, he says "Buy more beans and spuds." Then he throws up his mother to me. She managed with nine kids and NO income—just a truck garden and a couple of cows. I'm ashamed to send the children to school, their clothes are so badly worn. The neighbors bring over clothing which their children have outgrown. I have one good dress to my name. My husband always looks like an executive.

Our house needs repairing badly but he never has money for such "luxuries." Last Christmas he spent $40 on a gift for his boss. If he'd let me handle the money we would come out all right and I wouldn't have to worry about the utility company turning off the juice. What can I do?—CHURCH MICE

Dear Mice: Ask an unbiased third party to sit down with you both and explain the financial facts of life.

Brilliant Counsellors Cotillion To Benefit Legal Aid Foundation

South Bay Lawyers' Wives are busy with preparation for their fourth annual "Counsellors Cotillion," outstanding social event of the spring season, to be held this year on June 9 at the Palos Verdes Country Club. Mrs. Gerald Smith, Jr. and Mrs. Boris Woolley are serving as chairmen of the ball.

Proceeds from the benefit will go to the South Bay Legal Aid Foundation and Lawyers Reference Service which is sponsored by the South Bay Bar Association.

The services offered by the Bar Association are twofold in character. First, the Legal Aid Foundation furnishes legal service to indigent persons in need of immediate, emergency assistance; second, the Lawyers Reference Service refers persons who are not indigent but merely want an attorney to be referred to them by the Bar Association.

During 1961 approximately 950 people availed themselves of the services offered and of such number 450 were given assistance in the Legal Aid office and the remaining 500 people were referred to lawyers belonging to the Panel of the Lawyers Reference Service. In 1962 through the end of April, 300 persons availed themselves of these assistance in the Legal Aid office.

The costs of furnishing the above services to the citizens of the South Bay Judicial District are defrayed by a small registration fee paid by persons seeking legal assistance, and in addition to such income the attorneys of the South Bay have made donations and those who are members of the Lawyers Reference Panel have paid dues and have given a percentage of any fees they have collected to the Legal Aid Foundation.

The last report received from the State of California indicated that there was only one other Legal Aid office in the State of California that services and 150 were given was entirely self-supporting without receiving any funds from the government or from any charitable organization. The South Bay Legal Aid Foundation offers services to the public without any government subsidy and without any donation from any charity.

The Legal Aid Foundation maintains an office at 421 Pier Ave., Hermosa Beach, which is open on Thursday from 1 to 5 p.m. and on Saturday from 10 to 1 p.m.

A substantial part of the cost of operating this service is paid for by proceeds from the annual "Counsellors Cotillion."
